for "Otdel'naya Rota Shantsevykh Ognemetov" (Separate Company of Trench Flame-thromers). Col Puzanov refused to give further information

Onsho units were, in all probability, recently organized within the GOFG and would be assigned to reinforced infantry regiments and higher level tactical units in case of war or emergency. For ational order for a maneuver or a CPX which mentioned any imaginary, non-existing units. I therefore believe, that ORShO actually existed.

4. Neither during nor after World War II, have I ever heard of any flame-thrower units in the Soviet Army. This is all the information I have on the subject.
